Käthe Kollwitz Prize 2010 – Mona Hatoum

Award ceremony and exhibition

On the 30th of July 2010 the Akademie der Künste (Academy of Arts), Berlin, will present the Käthe Kollwitz Prize to Mona Hatoum. In awarding this prize to Mona Hatoum the Academy of Arts honours her for a multifaceted body of work, in which the human body, caught between violence, power and vulnerability, is a central preoccupation. The award carries 12,000 Euros in prize money. The jury included members of the Academy's Fine Arts section - Lothar Böhme, Dieter Goltzsche and Robert Kudielka. A catalogue will be produced to accompany the exhibition.

From the 31st of July to the 5th of September 2010 the Academy of Arts will be showing a selection of the artist's works at the Pariser Platz premises. The exhibition includes Deep Throat (1996), a table set for one person and featuring a plate bearing not food but a video projection of the path into the abyss. Also on display are recent works such as Undercurrent (red) (2008), Electrified III (2010) and Paravent (2008). During the Long Night of Museums on 28th August 2010 the video piece Measures of Distance (1988) will be on display. There will also be a talk on Mona Hatoum's work by Ursula Panhans-Bühler and Friedrich Meschede.

Born in Lebanon to Palestinian parents in 1952, the artist has lived in London since 1975 and also in Berlin, since receiving the DAAD grant in 2003. Since the 1980s her work has been shown in prestigious museums around the world and featured in numerous international exhibitions including the Venice Biennale and Documenta in Kassel. In May 2010, Mona Hatoum was elected as a member of the Akademie der Künste.

With her early performances (e.g. Roadworks, 1985) Mona Hatoum was already articulating a type of practice that she still favours to this day, a formal vocabulary born out of Minimalism and conceptual art. The artist who grew up in Beirut has often woven into her work political concerns and personal experiences referencing her roots in the Middle East as well as her 35 years of living in Western Europe. Since the 1990s her work has increasingly moved towards installations that explore and interpret spatial contexts and sculpture that encourages the active participation of the viewer. Interaction is an important aspect of her work that investigates different layers of aesthetic experience. Hatoum's repertoire of forms and materials encompasses not only photography and video but also furniture, everyday objects, kitchen utensils and very diverse materials like human hair, textiles, steel, printed matter, light bulbs and even plants. Her use of everyday objects is both appealing and familiar to the viewer and at the same time quite unsettling as these objects have been transformed into foreign and threatening sculptures.

The Käthe Kollwitz Prize is an annual award presented by the Akademie der Künste to an individual working in the area of fine arts. The prize is co-sponsored by the Kreissparkasse Köln, funding body of the Käthe Kollwitz Museum, Cologne. Previous recipients have been Ulrike Grossarth (2009), Hede Bühl (2007), Lutz Dammbeck (2005), Peter Weibel (2004).

Statement of the jury

The jury of the Fine Arts Section of the Akademie der Künste has awarded the Käthe-Kollwitz-Preis 2010 to Mona Hatoum for her outstanding achievement as an artist working in different media, notably in performance, video, installation and sculpture. For three decades she has evolved amidst a civilisation governed by routine, self-assuredness and sentimentality a plastic language that renews the original experience of man's strangeness in the world. When in 1975 she was prevented from returning to her country of origin by the outbreak of the Lebanese civil war, she accepted this exile and with great artistic ingenuity transformed it into the expression of a basic human predicament. Mona Hatoum undermines the trust in the securities and props of everyday life by means of material transposition and changes of scale and context. Practical things such as household equipment or furniture are turned into dangerous objects. Light becomes a source of threat, maps are made to denounce their presumed topographical truth etc. Hatoum's concept is not that of simple alienation or loss of roots but the disturbing as well as shockingly true sensation of a raw and cruel inhospitality lurking behind the reassuring face of the established world, today perhaps more than ever before. The physical immediacy with which this perception inflicts itself on the spectator shows its authenticity by being capable of carrying, in accordance with the feeling of disorientation, also a certain humorous note.
